SATURDAY EVEN'G, OCTOBER 28.

ANTIQUITY OF MAN -A correspondent writes to the Loadon Times: Mr. Sydney B. T. Skertchly, of her majesty's geological survey, who is stationed at Brandon, Suffolk, has recently discovered some flint implements in that neightforhood, in beds formed before the close of the glacial period. One was picked out of the beds in a pit at Cufford, Suffolk, and two others were dug out of like beds in a pit at Botany, on the Norfolk side of Brandon. It was not till Mr. Skertchly himself found another implement at Cuiford, and saw the boulder clay above the bed from which he ex tracted it, that the importance of the discovery dawned upon him. Alongside the Culford implement he found a deposit of broken and scraped mammalian bones and some fresh water shells. These bones were in a circum scribed area. A jawbone containing teeth had been ferwarded to London to be examined.

Underneath the bones the clay was found to be burned. Mr. Skertchly's explanation is that we have here preserved the one solitary instance in the whole world of a camping ground of paleolithic men, and this cateping ground occurred below the boulder clay which belonged to the earliest part of the g acial period. These remains were thus far older than anything previously discovered. Tracing the boulder clay and the bads beneath across the country, he saw that the implements found at Botany bay were of the same are. The men who lived before the boulder clay appeared to him to be more intimately connected in time with the men of the paleolithic gravels lying upon the boulder clay than were the latter with the men of the sectithic age, who scooped out those ancient flot mines near Brandon called "Grime C
